I. NEW IMPORTANT SUPREME COURT CASE

In McCoy v. Louisiana, 2018 U.S. Lexis 2802 (5/14/18), the United States Supreme Court held that defense counsel may not concede guilt over the client's unambiguous objection. The Court held that the lawyer's decision to concede guilt was a structural error warranting a new trial because the admission blocked the defendant's right to make fundamental choices. The Court held that the defendant has the right to determine the objective of the defense. The Court reiterated that the defendant is the master of his own defense. Trial management is the province of the lawyer, but some decisions are reserved for the client, to wit, whether to plead guilty or stand trial, whether to waive a jury trial, whether to testify or not. "When the client expressly asserts that the objective of his defense is to maintain innocence of the charged crimes, the lawyer must abide by that objective and may not overrule it by conceding guilt. However, trial management decisions including what objections to make, what witnesses to call, what arguments to advance are within the province of the lawyer. Matters of trial strategy must be discussed with the client.
